The resource person and the guest speaker for the webinar was Dr. Kajal Rai, Assistant Professor at I. K. Gujral Punjab Technical University, Mohali campus. She is an experienced Researcher with a demonstrated history of working in the higher education industry.

The ultimate objective of the webinar was to understand the challenges faced by the startups in a spirit of problem- solving. To help student groups to generate and analyze ideas has already accelerated the pace of viable ideas and then transform their ideas into prototype with POC through innovation and creativity. A startup survives only when it shows its commitment towards partnership and prove itself as a trustworthy brand that does not run away when the going gets tough. Transparency is a key factor to success of start ups. The key Takeaway of the webinar- To Understand steps for setting new startups or new products, How much important is knowing oneself and be close to the market? Covid has already accelerated the pace of emerging startups and henceforth the pace of startups will bloom at SBBS University.

Website link: <https://www.sbbsuniversity.ac.in/events/95-event.php>

The United Nations observes International Day of Non-Violence every year on 2nd October, which is the birth anniversary of Mahatma Gandhi. The day is observed across the world to spread the message of non-violence. The University Institute of Humanities (SBBSU), commemorated this solemn day by organizing a guest lecture on the subject. The resource person invited was, Dr. Rakesh Bawa, Department of History, G.N. Khalsa College, Daroli Kalan, Jalandhar. Dr. Aneet Kumar, Dean, UIE, presided over the event. Mr. Devinder Singh, Associate Professor, started the proceedings by welcoming the guest, the faculty members and students. He delved briefly on the concept of non-violence and the contribution of Mahatma Gandhi. He then invited the guest speaker to give his address.

Dr. Bawa began by showing, through examples, how the concept of non-violence has been part of Indian philosophical and religious narrative; as examples he referred to the teachings of Gautama Buddha and Lord Mahavira. However, it was Mahatma Gandhi who realized its potential for achieving socio-political goals. He began his experiments in Africa where he raised his voice against racial discrimination. He ended his talk by listing the names of world personalities who were influenced by the concept of non-violence. A few questions were asked by students and faculty which were deftly answered by the speaker.

To inspire kindness and to mark the World Kindness Day, an event was organized today by the University Institute of Humanities in collaboration with the NCC unit of the university. It was held under the aegis of the IQAC.

The event began with an address by Mr. Devinder Singh, HoD, Humanities, to the cadets of NCC, both boys and girls, and the students from UIH. He told them, in brief, the history of the World Kindness Movement and delved upon the rationale behind holding such an event. He told them how, with kindness, we can overcome the divides of politics, race, religion, and gender. The students pledged to perform random acts of kindness once in a while. They felt so inspired that they resolved to collect food items and clothing to be donated to the needy.

Thereafter, the students and NCC cadets took out a rally within the university campus. They carried placards bearing slogans pertaining to acts of kindness. Lt. Jagjit Singh, the NCC officer, graciously cooperated with UIH to make the event a success. He applauded the students for participating enthusiastically in the event. It turned out to be a novel experience for the students!
